Grass Identification course

Ideal for those beginning their journey in grass identification or individuals seeking to refresh their knowledge, this course covers the significance of grasses, the art of grass identification, and hands-on practical training. Participants will engage in field exercises to learn the key features for identification and discuss the ecological value associated with each grass species.

Veld Management course

This foundational course covers essential aspects of veld/rangeland management. It comprises three modules: understanding the natural resources we utilize, grasping important ecological principles, and implementing effective practices in veld management. Whether you're a novice or looking to deepen your understanding, this course provides valuable insights into sustainable land use.
